The speakers debate the meaning, wisdom and likely future development of the Supreme Court's and Fifth Circuit's decisions on the availability of punitive damages to seamen and their families. Hear the history, development and treatment of punitive damages under the general maritime law as relates to claims for unseaworthiness prior to the passage of the Jones Act through the current time.

Jeffrey R. Bale, The Bale Law Firm, PLLC, Sugar Land, TX
David W. Robertson, The University of Texas School of Law, Austin, TX

2:15 p.m. .50 hrRegulatory Challenges and Enforcement: Ballast Water, Air Emissions and Marine Casualties

This presentation focuses on key regulatory challenges confronting the maritime industry such as ballast water and the contradictory approaches to regulation taken by the Coast Guard and EPA. Uncover the challenges associated with compliance with the MARPOL Annex VI low sulfur fuel requirements and how companies are dealing with these challenges. Learn the revisions to the marine casualty reporting requirements/guidance and ramifications of not reporting.

Jeanne M. Grasso, Blank Rome LLP, Washington, DC

2:45 p.m. .50 hrRemoval into Admiralty

Prior to 2012, it was generally understood that a defendant could not remove a maritime case "into admiralty." Some courts have interpreted the 2011 amendments to the removal statute to change that rule. This presentation explores the controversy.

Michael F. Sturley, The University of Texas School of Law, Austin, TX
