Ray Cantú, Austin	What's in an Insurance Policy? So, you think you know what "full coverage" means? Exactly what coverage is required under Texas law these days? Or what kind of coverage is available when a teenager delivers pizzas (or goes joyriding) in the family vehicle? Think again. Although the Texas Department of Insurance now permits insurers to vary their policies from the TDI form, the Texas Personal Automobile Insurance Policy is still the policy that is used by a vast majority of insurers. What we call a "policy," or an insurance contract, actually consists of five separate contracts. What are these contracts, and what kind of litigation can arise from them? When a prospective client walks in the door with an auto claim, where do you start? And where do you finish? What have Texas courts done lately with the Stowers Doctrine, bad faith, and Insurance Code claims? How do insurance companies decide what to do with liability and UIM limits in a multiple-car accident? Attend this informative session to learn how these and other issues will affect your practice—and your bottom line. Bobbi Sheahan, Dallas		11:00 a.m. .50 hr
