LUNCHEON PRESENTATION

12:15 pm 0.50 hr	Taking Stock of the New Supreme Court  The Supreme Court will soon wind down its first term with Justice Amy Coney Barrett—and a solid 6-3 conservative majority for the first time in generations. What are some of the key takeaways from the new Court, both procedurally and substantively? How big a difference has Justice Barrett’s replacement of Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg actually made? And what does all of this portend for the Court’s near- and longer-term future in general, and for labor and employment law, specifically? Obviously, there’s lots to discuss.  Stephen Vladeck, The University of Texas School of Law - Austin, TX
12:45 pm	10-Minute Break
12:55 pm 0.75 hr	Do Your Pay Equity Practices Support Your Policies of Diversity and Inclusion?  Many employers have announced great policies supporting diversity and inclusion for women and other protected classes, but have not checked to see if a pay equity analysis would show adherence to those policies. In the last few years, employers have faced increased litigation and loss of productivity due to claims that organizations still pay women and people of color less than white men for the same work—and these earnings gaps compound over time. Review how to address those issues in order to minimize risk and possibly improve morale and productivity.  Victoria Martin Phipps, Texas A&M University - College Station, TX
