Litigating Texas Tax Disputes in District Court: Opportunities and Pitfalls

Many taxpayers assume that an administrative appeal is the only option available to them for challenging a Texas tax assessment or a refund denial. But district court may present a better option in some instances, including situations where a taxpayer may be able to recover attorney's fees. This presentation focuses on various matters that should influence a taxpayer's decision to assert a Texas tax dispute in state district court.

Rebutting the Unitary Presumption

The Comptroller presumes that all affiliated entities are engaged in a unitary business so that combined reporting is required. This topic identifies circumstances in which the presumption may hurt taxpayers, and how to overcome the presumption when it does.

Ray H. Langenberg, Scott, Douglass & McConnico, LLP, Austin, TX

Good speakers, great information. Enjoyable and beneficial review. Really worthwhile!

Very timely and well organized. Great format. Great information.

3:30 p.m.

Substance over Form

In 2006, the Comptroller announced its intention to examine the business purpose of transactions between related parties designed to avoid sales and use tax on purchases of aircraft. Questions persist concerning the limits of the Comptroller's authority to ignore the form of these transactions and whether the Comptroller will extend this practice to other transactions and/or taxes. This presentation discusses and analyzes those issues.

Ask the Tax Policy Experts

Is the Texas franchise tax still a bit vague? Indefinite? Obscure? Confusing? If so, then you must attend this session as Janet Spies and Jerry Oxford from the Franchise Tax Policy Group at the Comptroller's office attempt to provide definite, exact, resolved or settled answers to your questions.

Attendees are invited to submit questions, in writing, in advance of the conference. Questions may be submitted by mail or fax with the conference registration form, or via the link at www.utcle.org/conferences/TM11.Please reference "Texas Margin Tax—Ask the Tax Policy Experts" with your submission.
