Damages Recoverable in a Car Wreck Case

I. Introduction

A personal injury lawsuit may be filed on behalf of a client following a car wreck. In a typical car wreck case there are a number of damages that an attorney may recover for their client. These damages often depend on the severity of the case. The potential damages recoverable can include the following: (1) past and future medical bills, (2) past lost earnings, (3) future loss of earning capacity, (4) past and future pain and suffering, (5) past and future mental anguish, (6) past and future physical impairment, (7) physical disfigurement, (8) loss of support, consortium, and household services, and (9) property damage to the vehicle.

1. Past and future medical bills

Texas law allows an injured party to recover damages for past medical expenses when the injury was proximately caused by the negligence of another.

- In order to qualify for these damages, the plaintiff must show that the medical treatment was necessary and the charges/bills for the medical treatment were reasonable and necessary for the injuries resulting from the accident. See Smith v. Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., 101 S.W.3d 698, 702 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2003, n.p.h.).
- If the plaintiff can show—through competent evidence—that future medical treatment will be required as a result of the injuries, then an award for future medical bills is possible. Again, the injuries requiring future medical care must have resulted from the accident in question and proximately caused by the negligence of another. See id. Texas follows the reasonable probability rule for future damages related to personal injuries. Bell v. Castro, 2012 WL 5874322, at 6 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 2012, no pet.) (citing City of San Antonio v. Vela, 762 S.W.2d 314, 320 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 1988, writ denied) (emphasis added)).

- Past and future medical expenses/bills must be reasonable and necessary as a result of the injuries from the accident. Jackson v. Gutierrez, 77 S.W.3d 898, 902 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2002). This reasonable and necessary determination is made either through presentation of expert testimony, or through submission of affidavits in compliance with § 18.001 of the Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code. Id.; see also Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code § 18.001 (Vernon 1997).

2. Past lost earnings

A plaintiff is entitled to damages for past lost earnings or wages if they can prove—through competent evidence—that they were unable to work because of the injuries sustained in an accident caused by the negligence of another.

- Proof of this loss is most effectively accomplished through testimony and records from the plaintiff's medical providers. A plaintiff can also offer evidence of the average monthly amount of wages they earned prior to the accident, and then calculate the wages lost based on the time missed from work.
- Plaintiff must show a necessary causal nexus between the accident and the loss of earnings or wages. Jackson, 77 S.W.3d at 902; see also Morgan v. Compugraphic Corp., 675 S.W.2d 729, 731 – 32 (Tex. 1984) (finding that there was competent evidence to satisfy the causal nexus between the injury and award for damages related to an accident/injury at work).

3. Loss of earning capacity

A plaintiff can also seek damages for the future loss of earning capacity they may experience as a result of the accident caused by the negligence of another. Testimony and records from medical providers showing the permanence of the injuries and the likelihood that this will lead to an inability to work at their previous job or any job help establish
