Saving the Day Post-Trial: Sources

Here are the sources of some case-saving ambushes—some must be sprung in the trial court, others as late as appeal:

- Opinions (fundamental error, other stuff, incl. msj stuff).
 - Watch for Conflicting Authority—Make sure your court of appeals is on your side.
- Rules—for example:
 - legal/factual sufficiency in a civil bench trial (TRAP 33.1(d)).
 - Legal/factual sufficiency in post-verdict motion practice in jury trial (Rule 279)

HOW FAR CAN YOU PUSH THE ENVELOPE?

Saving the Day Post-Trial: Sources

If you are desperate enough, consider invoking an exception to the federal rule on error preservation:

Fed. courts may consider unpreserved issue which “involves a purely legal question, refusal to consider it would result in a miscarriage of justice, or its proper resolution is beyond doubt.” Vitale v. Keim, No. 01-95-00401-CV (Houston 1st 8/29/97)

Question: Do state courts already do this without saying so?

Complaints You Can First Raise on Appeal

Fundamental error: origin in Jones v. Black, 1 Tex. 527, 530 (1846); historical discussion In the Interest of J.F.C., 96 S.W.3d 256, 291 (Tex. 2002) (Dissenting, Hankinson, J.).

Now: “[D]iscredited doctrine . . . ” Tamez (2006); B.L.D. (2013)

Only applies:

- Lack of subject matter jurisdiction (but not in mandamus. Coppola, 535 ///506, 510 (Tex. 2017); Ron, 14-18-00711-CV (14th, 2018))
- Some juvenile delinquency cases, and some issues in parental right termination cases.
- When error directly, adversely affects public generally, as declared by statute or constitution. Cox v. Johnson, 638 S.W.2d 867, 868 (Tex. 1982)

Complaints You Can First Raise on Appeal

A constitutional argument does not necessarily equal fundamental error—check out virtually any sexually violent predator civil commitment case with error preservation issues.
