

Dealing With Bad Facts

Quentin Brogdon

Crain Lewis Brogdon
Dallas, Texas

214-598-1009
qbrogdon@crainlewis.com

“The Wrong Stuff”

“The Wrong Stuff”

- “[H]e crashed and was burned beyond recognition, but he should have known better than to wait so long before lowering the flaps. He nosed over and dove straight into Chesapeake Bay. [H]ow could anybody be in such poor condition as to pass out that quickly from hypoxia? There are no accidents and no fatal flaws in the machines: there are only pilots with the wrong stuff.”

Bad Clients and Bad Witnesses

Importance of the Plaintiff

- “It is an old rule and a good rule, that it is the duty of the trial court to try the lawsuit and not the individual litigant, for it has been said many times ‘A bad person may have a good lawsuit.’”
Transport Ins. Co. v. Cossaboon (El Paso 1956).

In a Just World, Bad Things Do
Not Happen to Good People

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary \(utcle.org/elibrary\)

Title search: Dealing with Bad Facts

Also available as part of the eCourse

eSupplement to the 2019 Conference on Criminal Appeals

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 41st Annual Page Keeton Civil Litigation Conference session
"Dealing with Bad Facts"