

PRESENTED AT

27th Annual

Nuts and Bolts of LLCs, LPs and Partnerships

July 11, 2018
Austin, TX

Model Company Agreements

Cliff Ernst
Elizabeth S. Miller
Doug Jones

Author contact information:

Cliff Ernst
McGinnis Lochridge LLP
Austin, Texas
cernst@mcginnislaw.com
512-495-6012

Elizabeth S. Miller
Professor of Law
Baylor University School of Law
Waco, Texas
Elizabeth_Miller@baylor.edu
(254) 710-6583

Doug Jones
McGinnis Lochridge LLP
Austin, Texas
djones@mcginnislaw.com
512-495-6013

Model Company Agreements

Table of Contents

	Page
I. Introduction	1
II. Company Agreements Generally	2
III. The Model Agreements.....	3
A. Introductory Paragraph	3
B. Article 1: Formation.....	5
C. Article 2: Members and Membership Interests.....	7
D. Article 3: Management of the Company, Meetings and Voting	18
E. Article 4: Capital Contributions	26
F. Article 5: Taxation and Allocations.....	28
G. Article 6: Distributions.....	29
H. Article 7: Bank Account, Books of Account, Reports and Fiscal Year	30
I. Article 8: Transfer Restrictions and Push Pull Provisions	34
J. Article 9: Exculpation, Scope of Duties, Indemnification and Advancement	35
K. Article 10: Winding Up.....	47
L. Article 11: Miscellaneous Provisions and Definitions.....	49
IV. Conclusion	51
Appendix A – Model Company Agreement for Manager-Managed, Multi-Member Limited Liability Company
Appendix B – Model Company Agreement for Member-Managed, Multi-Member Limited Liability Company
Appendix C – Model Company Agreement for Single Member Limited Liability Company

Model Company Agreements

Cliff Ernst
McGinnis Lochridge LLP
Austin, Texas

Elizabeth S. Miller
Professor of Law
Baylor University School of Law
Waco, Texas

Doug Jones
McGinnis Lochridge LLP
Austin, Texas

I. Introduction.

Records maintained by the Texas Secretary of State indicate that the limited liability company has become the entity of choice among Texas organizations. The office of the Texas Secretary of State reports that of the 178,938 certificates of formation filed for domestic for-profit entities in 2016, 150,266 (or approximately 84%) were limited liability companies and of the 194,195 certificates of formation filed for domestic for-profit entities in 2017, 166,589 (or approximately 86%) were limited liability companies.¹

It is often stated that one of the benefits of organizing an entity as a limited liability company is that this form of entity offers the owners and governing authority of the entity the flexibility to agree to provisions for the economic terms and governance that are more flexible than available with respect to a corporation. This is true, and indeed limited liability companies are sometimes used to create highly complex structures with multiple classes of ownership interests and highly customized provisions regarding management and governance of the entity, including complicated provisions for voting and management succession. However, given the large number of entities now being created as limited liability companies in Texas and other states, it is likely that many of these new entities are not entities with complex structures with multiple classes of ownership and complex bureaucracies for governance. Statistics compiled by the Internal Revenue Service show that for the tax year 2013 (the most recent year for which statistics are currently

¹ The office of the Texas Secretary of State has provided to the authors the following information about numbers of certificates of formation and initial LLP registrations filed for domestic entities:

	2017	2016
For-Profit Corporations	21,938	22,407
Professional Corporations	719	674
Professional Associations	432	537
Limited Liability Companies	166,589	150,266
Limited Partnerships	4,516	5,054
Limited Liability Partnerships	525	624

available), over 63% of the S corporation returns are for single-shareholder S corporations and over 27% have only two shareholders.² The Internal Revenue Service does not publish similar statistics for limited liability companies, and of course single-member limited liability companies are typically disregarded entities that do not file tax returns. But if one assumes that most limited liability companies are closely held entities, then by analogy, it is likely that a large portion of limited liability companies have one or two owners. Therefore, it is much more likely that practitioners will find themselves needing to draft simple limited liability company agreements suitable for entities with one or two or a very few owners, rather than more complex documents.

The purpose of this paper is to present and discuss models for governing agreements for limited liability companies when a simple structure is needed.

II. Company Agreements Generally.

As with other filing entities under the Texas Business Organizations Code (“BOC”),³ a Texas limited liability company is created by the filing of a certificate of formation meeting the requirements of BOC §3.005 and §3.010. The existence of the company commences when the filing of the certificate takes effect as provided in BOC Chapter 4.⁴

The BOC does not expressly require that a Texas limited liability company have a company agreement, but it is difficult to conceive of a situation in which there would not be some skeletal agreement of the members regarding the conduct and affairs of the limited liability company.⁵ The statute expressly recognizes that a company agreement may be written or oral.⁶ However, it is obviously advisable for a limited liability company to have a written company agreement to provide certainty and avoid ambiguity about the ownership and management of the entity.

It should be noted that in the event of a conflict between the language of the certificate of formation and the company agreement, the language of the certificate of formation will govern.⁷

² <http://www.irs.gov/uac/SOI-Tax-Stats-Table-6>Returns-of-Active-Corporations,-Form-1120S>

³ TEX. BUS. ORGS. CODE ANN. § 1.001 ET SEQ.

⁴ TEX. BUS. ORGS. CODE ANN. § 3.001(c).

⁵ Inasmuch as the BOC recognizes oral as well as written company agreements, a course of dealing may reflect the company agreement of the members on some matters. Furthermore, any provision that may be contained in the company agreement may be included in the certificate of formation. TEX. BUS. ORGS. CODE ANN. § 101.051(a). Even a very basic certificate of formation would seemingly constitute a company agreement as to certain items, such as the name of the company, the type of management (i.e., member-managed or manager-managed), and the identity of the initial members or managers.

⁶ TEX. BUS. ORGS. CODE ANN. § 101.001(1) (defining “company agreement” as “any agreement, written or oral, of the members concerning the affairs of a limited liability company”).

⁷ TEX. BUS. ORGS. CODE ANN. § 101.052(d). See Pinnacle Data Servs., Inc. v. Gillen, 104 S.W.3d 188 (Tex. App. – Texarkana 2003, no pet.) (holding voting provision in limited liability company’s articles of organization controlled over conflicting voting provision contained in the company’s regulations). Because BOC § 101.052(d) is not listed among the provisions that cannot be waived or modified in the company agreement, the statute arguably permits the members to provide in the company agreement (or certificate of formation) that the company agreement controls over a conflicting provision in the certificate of formation. See TEX. BUS. ORGS. CODE ANN. § 101.051, 101.052, 101.054.

Also available as part of the eCourse

Answer Bar: LLCs and Partnerships Formation

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 27th Annual LLCs, LPs and Partnerships session

"Drafting Partnership and LLC Agreements for the New Partnership Audit Rules"