Before the Pandemic...

- Neither Federal or Texas state laws required employers to provide paid sick leave to employees.
 - Even before the pandemic, several municipalities (e.g., Austin, Dallas, and San Antonio) enacted local legislation requiring employers to provide paid sick leave.
 - These local legislative efforts have been on hold pending a decision from the Texas Supreme Court.

Before the Pandemic...

- The Family and Medical Leave Act (“FMLA”)—required covered employers to provide up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for specific enumerated qualifying events.
- To address the unique circumstances presented by COVID-19, Congress enacted additional legislation to provide paid leave.
