FIDUCIARIES GONE WILD:
Fiduciary Risk Management for Individual Executors, Trustees and Other Fiduciaries

I. Introduction

Executors, trustees and other fiduciaries owe the highest duties known to law and are held to strict standards of conduct. Serving as a fiduciary is not for the faint of heart, and one should give serious thought before agreeing to serve as a fiduciary. Do you have enough extra time to fulfill seemingly endless obligations? Are you organized and able to store massive amounts of data? Do whiney or entitled people annoy you? Do you shut down or withdraw in stressful or confrontational situations? Can you set aside personal difference and treat individuals impartially – even when it is undeserved?

This paper will explore the inherent risks of individuals (i.e. non-professionals) serving as an executor or trustee and will offer suggestions for risk management and defending breach of fiduciary duty claims and related causes of action. This paper also provides guidance when advising clients on the appointment of family members or other loved ones in a fiduciary role. Section II of this paper defines “fiduciary” and what it means to serve in such capacity. Section III discusses the duties of a trustee, while Section IV specifically discusses the duties of an executor. Section V discusses suggestions for mitigating the risks associated with serving as either an executor or trustee and offers suggestions for avoiding conflicts in the administration of a trust or estate. Section VI discusses aspects of defending fiduciaries in fiduciary litigation.

II. What is a Fiduciary?

Blacks Law Dictionary defines a “fiduciary” as “a person holding the character of a trustee, or a character analogous to that of a trustee, in respect to the trust and confidence involved in it and the scrupulous good faith and candor which it requires. Thus, a person is a fiduciary who is invested with rights and powers to be exercised for the benefit of another person.” The Law Dictionary, available online at thelawdictionary.org. Executors and trustees are both fiduciaries and owe a high duty of good faith, fair dealing, honest performance and strict accountability to both the individual who appointed them in such capacity, as well as to the beneficiaries of either an estate or trust. In other words, a fiduciary is held to a high and exacting standard, with no exceptions.

The duties for both an executor and a trustee are similar. The duties and responsibilities of a trustee are outlined in both the trust agreement as well as the Texas Trust Code. A grantor of a trust may expand or limit the duties and responsibilities of a trustee beyond those in the Code; however, the grantor cannot instruct a trustee to act illegally or contrary to public policy. The duties of an executor are outlined in both the Texas Estates Code, as well as the Last Will & Testament of the decedent. Although this paper does not specifically delve into the duties of an agent under a power of attorney or a guardian, the duties applicable to an executor or trustee are generally applicable to other types of fiduciaries.

III. Trustee’s Duties

A trustee “shall administer the trust in good faith according to its terms and this subtitle.” Tex. Prop. Code §113.051. Furthermore, “in the absence of any contrary terms in the trust instrument or contrary provisions in this subtitle, in administering the trust the trustee shall perform all of the duties imposed of the trustee by the common law. Id. Some of the specific duties imposed on trustees under the Texas Trust Code and common law are described in more detail in this section.

A. Duty of Loyalty. A trustee must administer the trust solely in the interest of the beneficiaries. Tex. Prop. Code §117.007; See also Slay v. Burnett Trust, 187 S.W.2d 377, 387-88 (Tex.1945). The trustee may not self-deal; meaning that the trustee “is accountable to a beneficiary for the trust property and for any profit made by the trustee through or arising out of the administration of the trust, even though the profit does not result in a breach of trust.” Tex. Prop. Code §114.001(a). This does not mean that a trustee is unable to receive compensation for services provided as the trustee, but that the trustee cannot profit at the expense of the trust. Id.

B. Duty to Deal Impartially with Beneficiaries. “If the trust has two or more beneficiaries, the trustee shall act impartially in investing and managing the trust assets, taking into account any differing interests of the beneficiaries.” Tex. Prop. Code §117.008. However, it is important to examine the terms of a trust, since the trust instrument can expressly permit the trustee to favor one or more of the beneficiaries at the expense of the other beneficiaries. Tex. Prop. Code §116.004(b). For example, a grantor of a third-party special needs trust can provide in the trust instrument that the needs of the beneficiary with special needs are superior to those of the remainder beneficiaries and that the trustee may exhaust the entire corpus of the trust without regard to the interests of the remainder beneficiaries.

C. Duty to Exercise Reasonable Care and Skill. Under the common law, a trustee must administer the trust as a prudent person would, in light of the purposes, terms, and other circumstances of the trust. Restatement (3d) of Trusts §77 (2007). The duty of prudence requires the exercise of reasonable care, skill, and caution. Id. If the trustee possesses, or procured appointment by purporting to possess, special facilities or greater skill than that of a person of ordinary prudence, the trustee has a duty to use such facilities or skill. Id.

D. Duty to Invest Prudently. Under the Texas Trust Code, “A trustee must invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust.” Tex. Prop. Code §117.004(a). The investment plan and management decisions are evaluated in the context of the trust portfolio and not as an isolated asset. Tex. Prop. Code §117.004(b). To the extent relevant, the trustee is required to take into consideration the following: (1) general economic conditions, (2) the possible effect of inflation or deflation, (3) the expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies, (4) the role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio, (5) the expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital, (6) other resources of the beneficiaries, (7) needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital, (8) an asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of
