

Back to Basics Revenue Generating Activities and Tax Compliance

Nonprofit Organizations Back to Basics Workshop
January 6, 2019

Michaela Cromar, Signing Director
michaela.cromar@claconnect.com
817.882.2212

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

AT THE END OF THIS SESSION, YOU WILL BE ABLE TO:

- Differentiate between the most common nontaxable and taxable types of income.
- Understand when unrelated income can jeopardize an organization's tax exempt status.
- Structure some revenue generating activities so that they are not taxable.
- Know how to determine the amount of taxable fringe benefits to report on Form 990-T.

Revenue – We all need it

WHAT DO WE NEED TO KNOW?

Traditionally, foundations and charitable organizations got their income from one of two sources:

1. Contributions from individuals, businesses, other nonprofit organizations or government entities, and
2. Fees earned for carrying out their charitable purpose.

Over the years, nonprofits have been able to expand their revenue streams but in order for that income to be exempt from tax, the focus of the organization must remain with the charitable purpose.

Charitable Contributions – Substantiation Requirements (IRC 170(f))

©2014 CliftonLarsonAllen LLP

$250 Charitable contribution

- Contemporaneous written acknowledgement
 - Description and good faith estimate of the value of goods and services provided, or
 - Statement that “No goods or services were provided in return for the contribution” OR “The value of goods and services provided in connection with this $..... .
- Penalty: Denial of donor’s charitable deduction for the donor/$10 per contribution up to $5,000 for the organization.

Charitable Contributions – Exceptions

©2014 CliftonLarsonAllen LLP

- Tokens
 - 2% or less of Payment
 - Low-cost articles
- Intangible Religious Benefits
- Membership Benefits

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary \(utcle.org/elibrary\)

Title search: Back to Basics: Revenue Generating Activities and Tax Compliance

Also available as part of the eCourse

2019 Nonprofit Organizations Back to Basics eConference

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 2019 Nonprofit Organizations Back to Basics Workshop session
"3A: Back to Basics: Revenue Generating Activities and Tax Compliance"