REDEVELOPMENT CHALLENGES FOR THE 21ST CENTURY- A CASE STUDY: PLANO, TEXAS

1

Development patterns are changing

Numerous forces for changes in development patterns:

- Demographics
- Changing consumer preferences
- Need for interaction
- Desire for individuals to stay connected
- Sense of community
- Opportunity to work, live, play and dine in close proximity
- Less dependence on transportation
- More environmentally-friendly (sustainable)
- Vibrant, walkable communities
- Need to interact- social, business, and culture settings
- Develop businesses
- Transportation options have driven development patterns for decades

ISSUES FACED BY DEVELOPING CITIES

- The need to maintain a safe, secure, and healthy City
- Shifting land use patterns
- A need for "URBAN PLACES"
- Compact Development
- True "Mixed Use"
- Rise in mixed use developments sought by major employers;
- How to connect developments through technology, transportation and commerce
- Emergence of new uses through the advent of new technologies and innovation;
- Obsolete zoning
- Outdated limits on development density
- Stresses on aging and undersized infrastructure
- Political protests
- Affordable, workforce housing
- Changing demographics and the advent of an international community;
- 1970's era regional malls
- Increased internal and "pass-through" traffic created
