I. Overview

A. What is a Charitable Contribution?

1. Section 170 of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (hereinafter referred to as “IRC”) provides that an income tax deduction can be taken for any charitable contribution that is made within the taxable year.
2. IRC § 170(c) defines a charitable contribution as a gift or contribution made to or for the use of a qualified charitable organization.
3. The following quote from Sklar v. Comm’r, 125 T.C. 281 (2005) provides the basic definition of a charitable contribution:

In United States v. Am. Bar Endowment, supra, at 118 the Supreme Court said:

The sine qua non of a charitable contribution is a transfer of money or property without adequate consideration. The taxpayer, therefore, must at a minimum demonstrate that he purposely contributed money or property in excess of the value of any benefit he received in return . . .

A taxpayer may not deduct a payment as a charitable contribution if the taxpayer receives a substantial benefit for a payment to a charitable organization. Id. at 116-117; Ottawa Silica Co. v. United States, 699 F.2d 1124, 1131 (Fed. Cir. 1983); Singer Co. v. United States, 196 Ct. Cl. 90, 449 F.2d 413, 420, 422 (1971); S. Rept. 1622, 83d Cong., 2d Sess. 196 (1954). If the size of a taxpayer’s payment to a charity is clearly out of proportion to the benefit received, the taxpayer may claim a charitable contribution equal to the difference between a payment to the charitable organization and the market value of the benefit received in return on the theory that the payment has the “dual character” of a purchase and a contribution. United States v. Am. Bar Endowment, at 117. To be deductible, a charitable contribution must be a gift; i.e., a transfer of property without adequate consideration. Sec. 170(c); United States v. Am. Bar Endowment, supra at 118; Sklar v. Comm’r, supra at 612.

4. In Kaplan v. Comm’r, T.C. Memo. 2006-16 (2006), the Tax Court stated that the following essential elements of a valid inter vivos gift must be present to qualify as a charitable contribution:
 - (1) a donor competent to make the gift; (2) a donee capable of taking the gift; (3) a clear and unmistakable intention on the part of the donor to absolutely and irrevocably divest himself of the title, dominion, and control of the subject matter of the gift, in praesenti; (4) the irrevocable transfer of the present legal title and of the dominion and control of the entire gift to the donee, so that the donor can exercise no further act of dominion or control over it; (5) a delivery by the donor to the donee of the subject of the gift or of the most effectual means of commanding the dominion of it; (6) acceptance of the gift by the donee ...

Guest v. Comm’r, 77 T.C. 9, 15-16 (1981) (quoting Weil v. Comm’r, 31 B.T.A. 899, 906 (1934), aff’d, 82 F.2d 561 (5th Cir. 1936)).

B. Quid Pro Quo Transactions

1. When a donor receives a privilege or benefit in return for a contribution, the presumption is that the payment is not a gift. The donor has the burden of proving that the payment is not the equivalent of the benefit’s purchase price and that part of the payment qualifies as a contribution. See Rev. Rul. 67-246.
2. Charities (except government entities described in IRC § 170(c)(1)) are required to provide a written statement to donors who make quid pro quo contributions in excess of $75. The statement must inform the donor that the allowable tax deduction for the contribution is limited to the excess of the contribution over the value of goods or services provided by the charity. The statement must also provide a good faith estimate of the value of these goods or services. See IRC § 6115.
3. A payment for admission to an event is not deductible even if the charity uses the entire proceeds or if the taxpayer does not attend the event. However, a donor who properly rejects a charity-offered benefit may claim a deduction for the full amount of the gift. See Rev. Rul. 67-246.
4. A deduction for the cost of raffle tickets purchased from a charitable organization is disallowed on the ground that the chance received is full consideration for the payment. See Rev. Rul. 83-130.
5. In Pollard v. Comm’r, T.C. Memo. 2013-38 (Feb. 6, 2013), the taxpayer sold a conservation easement on his land to the county government in a bargain sale. As a part of the transaction, the taxpayer received a subdivision exemption. The county had required that taxpayer grant the county the conservation easement as a condition for granting taxpayer the subdivision exemption. The Tax Court held this to be a quid pro quo transaction, not a charitable contribution, and denied taxpayer’s deduction.

C. Charitable Contribution or Business Expense?

1. No deduction is allowed as a business expense for any contribution or gift which would be allowable as a deduction under IRC § 170 were it not for the percentage limitations or the requirements as to time of payment. This provision applies both to individuals and corporations. See IRC § 162(b).
2. A business expense deduction is allowable if the payment is made with a reasonable expectation of a financial return commensurate with the amount of the donation. See Treas. Reg. § 1.162-15(b); Rev. Rul. 54-3.
