

Forms 990-PF

Practical Considerations

Jody Blazek CPA
Blazek & Vetterling
2900 Wesleyan, Suite 200
Houston, Texas 77027
(713) 439-5739 office
Jody.Blazek@bvcpa.com

1

PF Compliance versus PC

- Organizational documents of a private foundation (PF) and a (PC) Public Charity must both contain prohibition against spending for benefit of insiders, referred to as disqualified persons, and permanent dedication of assets to charitable purposes listed in IRC § 501(c)(3).
- Differences are illustrated in the very different front pages and distinctive schedules reporting data to monitor adherence to specific restraints.

2

PF Compliance versus PC

Enhanced Tax Code Provisions Imposed on PFs

Excise Tax on Investment Income	§4940
Self-Dealing with Disqualified Persons	§4941
Minimum Distribution Requirement	§4942
Excess Business Holdings	§4943
Jeopardizing Investments	§4944
Taxable Expenditures	§4945

3

Practical Considerations

The Form 990-PF contains many parts with data and disclosures that allow one who knows the “Hard Don’t” that apply by statute to spending and practices of a private foundation to identify potential violation of the “Don’ts.”

- The same opportunities for data mining discussed by Eve for public charities certainly exist for a PF.
- Additionally advance IRS approval for some activities is required for a PF.

4

Practical Considerations

The XVII (27) Parts of Form 990-PF present facts and figures to allow the reader and IRS :

- to calculate any excise tax on investment income,
- to report transactions that reflect failures to meet standards of conduct, and
- to evaluate satisfactory compliance with applicable rules.

Recommendations

- Consider using cash basis for tax purposes to simplify conversion of accrual basis financial reports to cash for mandatory payout purposes.
- Design listing of grants paid (Part XV) and description (Part IX-A) of direct charitable activities (DCAs) to inform grant-seekers of PF's mission and intended beneficiaries to avoid overload of requests. Invest in good software!

Also available as part of the eCourse

2021 Nonprofit Organizations eConference

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 38th Annual Nonprofit Organizations Institute session

"Forms 990 and 990-PF: Practical Considerations"