

Getting the Most Out of Your Mediation: Tips to Maximize Your Mediation Time

UT Law CLE

August 12, 2021

© Scott Baker Mediation, LLC 2021

1

Written mediation statements

THEY ARE HELPFUL

PROVIDE REQUESTED
INFORMATION

© Scott Baker Mediation, LLC 2021

2

Information that helps your mediator prepare

- Facts and law that support your client's case or a favorable settlement for your client
- Key documents, case law, statutes, and rulings in your case (key parts highlighted)
- Summary of discovery that has been done and that remains
- Status of pending motions that will affect the negotiations
- Summary of settlement discussions—who has made offers to whom and responses
- Summary of categories and amounts of damages that your client will seek at trial
- Identify each decision-maker and mediation attendee
- Key insurance information (e.g. policy limits, subrogation reimbursements) and a summary of the status of insurance coverage (e.g. whether coverage for defense or indemnity are being disputed, etc.)

© Scott Baker Mediation, LLC 2021

3

Written mediation statements

SUCCINCT. THINK
MEMO, NOT BRIEF

LAY OUT A CLEAR
ROADMAP

IN ENOUGH TIME TO REVIEW AND REACT

© Scott Baker Mediation, LLC 2021

Pre-mediation conference

Take advantage of it to help the mediator help the parties

© Scott Baker Mediation, LLC 2021

5

Joint sessions and opening statements

Trend: fewer joint sessions and opening statements

Concern that the cons:

- Takes time and desire to “get down to business”
- Think know what everyone’s position and what will be said
- Emotions are high/will be counterproductive

May outweigh the pros:

- Opportunity to hear what is important to the other side
- Explain where your client is coming from
- Clients get to say what is important to them
- Set the tone—get mediation off on right foot

© Scott Baker Mediation, LLC 2021

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary \(utcle.org/elibrary\)

Title search: Mediation: Tips to Maximize Your Mediation Time

Also available as part of the eCourse

eSupplement to the 29th Annual Advanced Patent Law Institute

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 2021 Getting the Most Out of Your Mediation: Tips to Maximize Your Mediation Time session

"Getting the Most Out of Your Mediation: Tips to Maximize Your Mediation Time"