Stock Purchase

> Description

• Buyer purchases stock of another company directly from the stockholders

Primary Use

• Frequently used when target stock is not widely held (e.g., acquisition of closely held company or subsidiary of another company)

Advantages

- Buyer acquires all of the assets of the target no need to specifically identify and define all acquired assets necessary to continue operating target business
- Generally target liabilities isolated in target and do not become buyer liabilities
- Generally target contracts remain in place without consent of third parties (unless a contract contains a "change of control" provision)
- May not require target board approval
- Does not trigger appraisal rights

Disadvantages

- Buyer indirectly inherits all liabilities of the target (although isolated within target)
- Must obtain agreement from every selling stockholder
- No "step up" in tax basis of target assets (unless 338 election made)
