

WILSON
SONSINI

Lessons Learned from COVID-19: Remote Work and Remote Learning

Jason Storck, Brian L. King, Janice Lu, and Andrew Velazquez

Moderator & Panelists

Moderator:

■ Jason Storck

Panelists:

■ Brian L. King

■ Janice Lu

■ Andrew Velazquez

Remote Work & Remote Learning

- The COVID-19 pandemic created novel employment challenges, including obstacles brought about by quickly transitioning to a remote work environment and maintaining a partial or fully virtual workforce.
- These challenges often pushed employers to adjust how they managed this new environment and to reframe employee work expectations, with many of these issues continuing to be present today.
- This panel discussion walks through some of the lessons learned in the employment context during the past 2-year pandemic, focusing on lessons related to tracking and protecting sensitive business information and navigating applicable state laws for a more mobile and remote workforce.

WILSON SONSINI

Issues with Remote Workers

Management of remote employees:

- Work location and underlying employment relationship.
- Protecting the employer's confidential information.
- Handling employment-related investigations.

WILSON SONSINI

Work Location & the Employment Relationship

Employee work location determines the law applicable to the employment relationship.

- State Employment Laws
- Intellectual Property
- Employment Agreements

WILSON SONSINI

Work Location & the Employment Relationship

Employee work location determines the law applicable to the employment relationship.

- State Employment Laws
- Intellectual Property
- Employment Agreements

WILSON SONSINI

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary \(utcle.org/elibrary\)

Title search: Lessons Learned from COVID-19: Remote Work and Remote Learning

Also available as part of the eCourse

Lessons learned from COVID-19: Remote Work and Remote Learning

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 35th Annual Technology Law Conference session

"Lessons Learned from COVID-19: Remote Work and Remote Learning"