Experts: Coastal Transport Co. v. Crown Central Petroleum, 136 S.W.3d 227 (Tex. 2004)

Negligence and gross-negligence case

- Explosion in bulk loading facility caused by gasoline spill and engine spark

Expert testimony on conscious indifference for gross negligence

- “In your opinion, did Coastal have an actual subjective awareness of the risk involved in failing to stop using probes that can have [sensor failure] problems?”
- “And in your opinion, did Coastal nevertheless proceed with conscious indifference to the rights, safety or welfare of others?”
- No objection

Procedural history

- Trial court directs a verdict because no evidence of gross negligence
- COA reverses directed verdict because of failure to object to expert’s testimony
- SCOTX reverses and renders, affirming trial court’s judgment
