“Noneconomic damages” means damages awarded for the purpose of compensating a claimant for

- physical pain and suffering,
- mental or emotional pain or anguish,
- loss of consortium,
- disfigurement,
- physical impairment,
- loss of companionship and society,
- inconvenience,
- loss of enjoyment of life,
- injury to reputation, and
- all other nonpecuniary losses of any kind other than exemplary damages.

Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code § 41.001 (12)

But see Bentley v. Bunton (Tex. 2002)

No evidence to support the SIZE of $7 million mental anguish award.

What's the Standard of Review in Texas?

The “sole” standard for “determining whether damages are excessive” is “factual sufficiency,” which requires courts to “examine all the evidence in the record to determine whether sufficient evidence supports the damage award, remitting only if some portion is so factually insufficient or so against the great weight and preponderance of the evidence as to be manifestly unjust.”

Pope v. Moore (Tex. 1986)
