2022 – Macroeconomic Backdrop

- 2022 has seen a slow-down in deal-making and a more conservative approach to transactions, including valuations
- Causes for caution include:
 - Inflation – in particular, rising commodity and energy prices;
 - Sharply rising interest rates;
 - Inability to predict growth;
 - Sanctions – in particular, new sanctions affecting Russian operations;
 - Supply-chain disruptions;
 - Increasing regulatory scrutiny;
 - Challenging debt financing markets; and
 - A more challenging and volatile macroeconomic environment overall.

Impact on Private Equity Investment

- According to S&P Global Market Intelligence, total private equity deal volume in the first half of 2022 lagged behind that of 2021 in terms of both value and volume, with total deal value of $415 billion representing a 28% decline year-over-year and total deal volume of 1,727 representing a 20% decline year-over-year
- Sectors that attracted private equity investment in 2022 included technology, media and telecommunications as well as healthcare and energy transition, including both renewable energy and energy efficiency, storage and management

Valuations

- 2022 also has seen a decline in valuations in certain sectors
- In particular, market headwinds have had a tangible impact on valuations in the retail technology space, where concerns around growth and inflation have coupled to particularly impact mid- to late-stage businesses
- According to CB Insights' State of Retail Tech report, funding in the space cratered in Q2 2022 from $23.3 billion to $13.2 billion, with Klarna's July funding round serving as a high-profile illustration of the challenges of the sector
