

HOT TOPICS IN TEXAS LAND USE LAW

27th Annual Land Use Conference
The University of Texas at Austin
Austin, Texas
April 20-21, 2023

Terrence S. Welch
Brown & Hofmeister, L.L.P.
740 E. Campbell Road, Suite 800
Richardson, Texas 75081
214/747-6100
www.bhlaw.net
twelch@bhlaw.net

I.

Introduction

Both the curse and beauty of practicing local government law in Texas is that local governments often find themselves on the cutting edge of innovation, whether for good or for bad. This is particularly true in addressing land use matters. Ten or fifteen years ago, most cities did not anticipate that single-family homeowners would offer for rent to strangers a room or a portion of their homes for weekends, or that those same homeowners would ever consider renting their backyard pools or their gourmet kitchens and dining rooms to strangers on an hourly basis. Additionally, while neighboring cities often fought court battles over the extent of their respective extraterritorial jurisdictions with an eye toward future annexations, with the recent activity of the Texas Legislature gutting virtually all nonconsensual annexations, should a city now consider relinquishing its ETJ? What value does ETJ have nowadays, particularly with greater resident demand for the full array of municipal services immediately in newly annexed areas? The purpose of this paper is to identify several current hot-button land use topics and analyze how cities across Texas have endeavored to address these issues.

II.

Short-Term Rentals in Texas and Evolving Municipal Regulations

In late 2022 and early 2023 there has been a flurry of activity in North Texas about municipal regulation of short-term rentals (“STRs”). STR regulation continues to be a hot topic in land use practice, and not just in North Texas. Even though there have been multiple Texas cases involving STRs, the court opinions generally do not comprehensively define the contours of municipal regulation. The result: cities in Texas are still struggling to determine the permissible extent of STR regulation. Dallas, Fort Worth and Plano are emblematic of this struggle.

A. Texas Case Law on STRs

The Texas Supreme Court has not yet weighed in on the topic of municipal regulation of STRs,¹ and even though several STR cases have been considered by Texas

¹ In Tarr v. Timberwood Park Owners Association, 556 S.W.3d 274 (Tex. 2018), the Texas Supreme Court did, however, address short term rentals in the context of restrictive covenants being enforced by a homeowners’ association against a resident who utilized his property in the subdivision as an STR. The Court, after a very detailed discussion on the law pertaining to restrictive covenants in Texas, held that the restrictive covenants in question did not prohibit the resident’s use of his home as a short-term rental. In a February 2022 opinion, the Texas Supreme Court wrote, however, that a homeowners’ association’s deed restrictions could be amended to prohibit short-term rentals of appellate courts, they have provided little substantive direction for municipalities—but perhaps municipalities nevertheless can glean some guidance from the few appellate opinions addressing STRs.

The City of Austin has been at the forefront of STR regulations during the last decade. The February 2016 amendments to the Austin STR ordinance established three different categories of short-term rentals and corresponding licenses: Type 1 (owner-occupied residential rentals); Type 2 (residential rentals not part of a multifamily residential use, the unit is not owner-occupied and not associated with an owner-occupied principal residential use); and Type 3 (rentals that are part of a multifamily complex).² While the Austin ordinance provides for a fairly detailed licensing and regulatory scheme (required licenses, local contacts, occupancy limits, general limitations on uses and prohibited activities on short-term rental properties), the 2016 amendment was adopted in response to an outcry by neighbors living near short-term rental properties. Perhaps the most controversial provision of that ordinance amendment related to Type 2 rentals, phasing out all such rentals by April 1, 2022.³ Not surprisingly, litigation ensued.

In Zaatari v. City of Austin,⁴ the court of appeals addressed the April 1, 2022, termination date for all Type 2 rentals.⁵ It should be noted, however, the Austin ordinance also imposed several conditions on properties operated as STRs: (1) banning all assemblies, including “a wedding, bachelor or bachelorette party, concert, sponsored event, or any similar group activity other than sleeping,” whether inside or outside, after 10:00 p.m. and before 7:00 a.m.; (2) banning outdoor assemblies of more than six adults at any time; (3) prohibiting more than six unrelated adults or ten related adults from using the property at any time; and (4) giving City officials authority to “enter, examine, and survey” the short-term rentals to ensure compliance with applicable provisions of the City’s code of ordinances.⁶ Failure to comply with these provisions was punishable by a fine of up $2,000 per day and possible revocation of the operating license.⁷

property. See Jbrice Holdings v. Wilcrest Walk Townhomes Ass’n, 644 S.W.3d 179, 188 (Tex. 2022).

² See Austin, Tex., Code of Ordinances §§ 25-2-788-790.

³ See Austin, Tex., Code of Ordinances § 25-2-950.

⁴ 615 S.W.3d 172 (Tex. App.—Austin 2019, pet. denied).

⁵ Zaatari, 615 S.W.3d at 181.

⁶ Id. See also Austin, Tex., Code of Ordinances §§ 25-2-795(D)–(G), 25-12-213-1301.

⁷ Zaatari, 615 S.W. 3d at 181, citing Austin, Tex., Code of Ordinances §§ 25-1-462.

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary \(utcle.org/elibrary\)

Title search: Hot Topics In Texas Land Use Law

Also available as part of the eCourse

2023 Land Use eConference

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the

27th Annual Land Use Conference session

"Hot Topics"