Trust protectors/directed trusts

- Directed trusts
  - Someone other than the trustee has the authority to act for the trust or to direct the trustee to act in a particular way
  - Examples:
    - Money manager directs investments; trustee handles administrative tasks
    - Trustee manages investments; distribution advisor determines SNT distributions
- Trust protectors
  - A type of directed trust
  - Trust protectors typically make infrequent, out of the ordinary decisions

Trust protectors are not trustees

- It is possible to split the trustee duties among multiple trustees
  - Investment trustee, distribution trustee, administrative trustee, etc.
- If the person is a trustee, he/she has a whole bucket of fiduciary duties
- Trust protectors are not trustees
  - They (typically) are fiduciaries, but duties may be limited

Texas Trust Code § 114.0031

- A trust protector is a fiduciary except in one case:
  - If the protector's only power is to remove and appoint trustees, advisors, trust committee members or other protectors and the protector does not exercise that power to appoint himself/herself, the trust agreement may provide that he/she is not a fiduciary
  - This can be very useful in a special needs trust
