PREFACE

My interest and the subsequent papers I have authored on the topic of Stowers emanate from the numerous so-called Stowers letters I have reviewed over the years which almost, without exception, are not valid Stowers demands. An invalid and non-compliant Stowers demand sent only after obtaining an excess verdict can certainly spoil the great result obtained, not counting having to disclose to the soon-to-be unhappy client that collection is going to be a real problem because the defendant is judgment proof and an insurance company is the only means of recovering a judgment. All that hard work may be for naught and a legal malpractice claim can be looming despite the great verdict.

A Stowers demand is not something to wing or slap together. Horseshoes and hand grenades will not work; in other words, substantial compliance will not satisfy Stowers' requirements. Precision is essential.

This paper is intended to inform and simplify Stowers and emphasize precision. Every case is different, there are no Stowers forms and what you say in your so-called Stowers letter matters.

If you work hard to obtain a large verdict in excess of policy limits and intend on holding the insurer accountable, then you owe it to your client and yourself to read and understand Stowers, whether it is this paper, another resource, or your own independent research. Your client and you deserve a meaningful opportunity to collect a verdict in excess of policy limits, but only if you have made a valid and enforceable Stowers offer.

MISCONCEPTION AND MISANALYSIS

Inquiry: The defendant has not responded to my Stowers demand. What can I do?

Response: Are you sure your demand was a proper Stowers demand?

Inquiry: Yes it is a Stowers demand. Why are they not responding?

...

Inquiry: I obtained a verdict in excess of limits. How do I make the insurance company pay?

Response: Did you make a Stowers demand?

Inquiry: Yes, I am sure I made a Stowers demand.

In my experience, chances are the demand letter sent is not a valid and enforceable Stowers demand.

Stowers, unfortunately, conjures up much misinformation and misconceptions. Most view Stowers as simply making a liability insurer pay more than the insured's policy limits as a result of writing what one may believe is a Stowers letter. Some mistakenly believe that Stowers means the plaintiff – the judgment creditor – can go directly against the liability insurer to collect any excess amount over policy limits. (Wrong). Others think big damages in excess of policy limits automatically translates into Stowers. (Wrong again). Others tragically discount issues of coverage and other necessary Stowers elements, focusing solely on the importance of making a demand for “limits.” (Equally and dangerously wrong).

But just what is Stowers? What are the essentials for making a valid Stowers demand? How do you write a valid and enforceable Stowers letter/demand? What are the defenses to Stowers? Can you just borrow a form from someone and plug in the names and the policy limits and say this is a Stowers letter? (Please no).

Among other things, this paper and presentation is to: assist you in composing a valid and enforceable Stowers letter; avoid many of the errors that negate a valid Stowers demand;
