Business Definition of Friction

- The concept of business friction: anything that prevents or dissuades customers/clients from buying your products or services. For customers, friction can be long wait times on hold, products that are out of stock, inconsistent wait times, or a bad experience with a company's website or staff.
- Friction can make the difference between a happy repeat client and lost revenue opportunities.
- A Forbes article reported that half of customers surveyed switched brands after a poor interaction, often staying away from those brands for up to two years.

GOAL = Reduce Friction

- Identify the pain points clients are experiencing by listening to clients through interviews, prior reviews, and surveys.
- Increase efficiency of the delivery of services
- Train client-facing team members and provide autonomy for responding to client concerns
- Create a culture of priority on client satisfaction and service
