I have worked for my company for 6 months. I just had a baby and want to take 4 weeks off to nurse my son. I don't have any vacation or paid time off available. My company said if I am not back to work on Monday, I will be fired. Isn't this pregnancy discrimination?

Brief description of your legal issue:

I own a company with 100 employees. One of my female employees just asked for two weeks off for an in vitro procedure. The employee has no available vacation. We have a strict policy that if you miss three days, you are fired. Do I have to let her have the two weeks off?
