

Avoiding the Witness Chair: Maintaining Privilege as In-House Counsel (Or, Was The Communication Made To Facilitate the Rendition of Legal Services)

Presented by: MATT DOW
Jackson Walker L.L.P.
100 Congress Avenue, Suite 1100
Austin, Texas 78701

COMPLICATED

“In-house attorneys are wielding increasing and enormous power in the running of corporate America. Attorneys these days play leading, not just supporting, roles, getting involved in virtually every kind of business decision.”

Forbes,
November 6, 1995

How to help the Judge make a good, thoughtful decision (for you).

THE PRIVILEGE

- Protects from compelled disclosure every communication (written or verbal) that is:
 - between an attorney and the attorney’s client,
 - made in confidence, and
 - for the purpose of obtaining legal advice
- Protects only the communication
 - does not protect underlying facts and circumstances about which the client seeks or obtains legal advice

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary \(utcle.org/elibrary\)

Title search: Avoiding the Witness Chair: Maintaining Privilege as In-House Counsel (Or, Was The Communication Made to Facilitate the Rendition of Legal Services)

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 40th Annual Corporate Counsel Institute session

"Avoiding the Witness Chair: Maintaining Privilege as In-House Counsel"