4:00 p.m. 1.00 hr | .50 hr ethics

Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning: Legal and Ethical Considerations

How can people help AI to avoid picking up bad habits or worse, perpetuating discrimination? AI and ML are transforming people's daily lives, but at the same time raise legal and ethical concerns like bias and discrimination, fairness, IP ownership, and data rights and privacy. This panel discusses real-world examples of such concerns, the role AI and ML systems may play, and the associated legal implications.

Moderator:
Hong Shi, Haynes and Boone, LLP, Austin, TX

The Supreme Court's Decision in Google v. Oracle

It was billed the "copyright case of the century." Now that the Supreme Court has weighed in, what is next? How broad—or narrow—is this ruling, and what does it mean for software? And what does the court's discussion of fair use mean for copyrighted works outside of software? This presentation deconstructs the Supreme Court's opinion to identify exactly what the Supreme Court said—and where the next battle lines are likely to be drawn.

Goodbye Third-Party Cookies: Why They're Going Away, and What's the Impact to Adtech for our Companies?

The passage of the GDPR and the CCPA forced businesses to make operational and structural changes on their websites that accomplished the lawmakers' desired effect of granting consumers greater choice over the data that is collected during a website visit. Industry and legal experts discuss what's next now that the Cookies are crumbling. Will concepts like a universal personal ID satisfy the rigid consent requirements of the GDPR and other privacy laws that regulate tracking technologies? Tune in to the conversation and the solutions they are implementing to help the adtech industry survive.
