Every Law Firm Is a Technology Business

By Jim Calloway

IN EARLY 2015 the Wild Sover Journal, on the occasion of changing the name of its business section from "Marketplact" Business & Tech," stated that "lefvery business is a technology business. Further, the nerespondence of the li-school business is a technology business. Further, the nerespondence of the li-school business, Fore hanging the name of the li-school business. Fore hanging the name of the li-school business is a technology business. Further all, information technology business. Further all, information technology business is a technology business. Further all, information technology business is a technology business. Further all, information technology business. Further all, information technology business is a technology business. Further all, information technology and advised business business for the direct and information and advisey business. Further all, information technology and advises was always based on the information and advises further all, information and advises further all information and advises further all information and advises further all information and advises the retrieval, analytic field business for the school busines of the business world, and information and advises the retrieval, analytic field business further exists. If the advises are always based on the information and advises that always based on the information and advises that always based on the information and advise trans always based on the information and advises that always based on the information analog and the down. E-classovery is one example. There was a time when many lawy believed the idea of e-discovery was impossible for them to man not to mention incredibly expensive. In the early days both those concepts were sometimes proven true, Some law firms for themselves with what appeared to be no option other than has their diset up tages units to cubide e-discovery vendors. But

Despite many lawyer's antipathy toward technology tools, we have no choice but to use today's business tools.

"I have to confess to this Court, I am not computer literate. I have not found presence in the cybernetic revolution. I need a secretary to help me turn on the computer. This was out of my bailiwick."
