

An architectural rendering of a modern office building with a glass facade. The building has a curved, multi-story structure with large windows reflecting the sky. In the foreground, there is a landscaped courtyard with a paved walkway, low-lying plants, and a concrete bench. Several people are depicted in the scene: two people sitting on the bench, a couple walking towards the camera, a woman walking away, and two men walking on the right. The overall atmosphere is bright and professional.

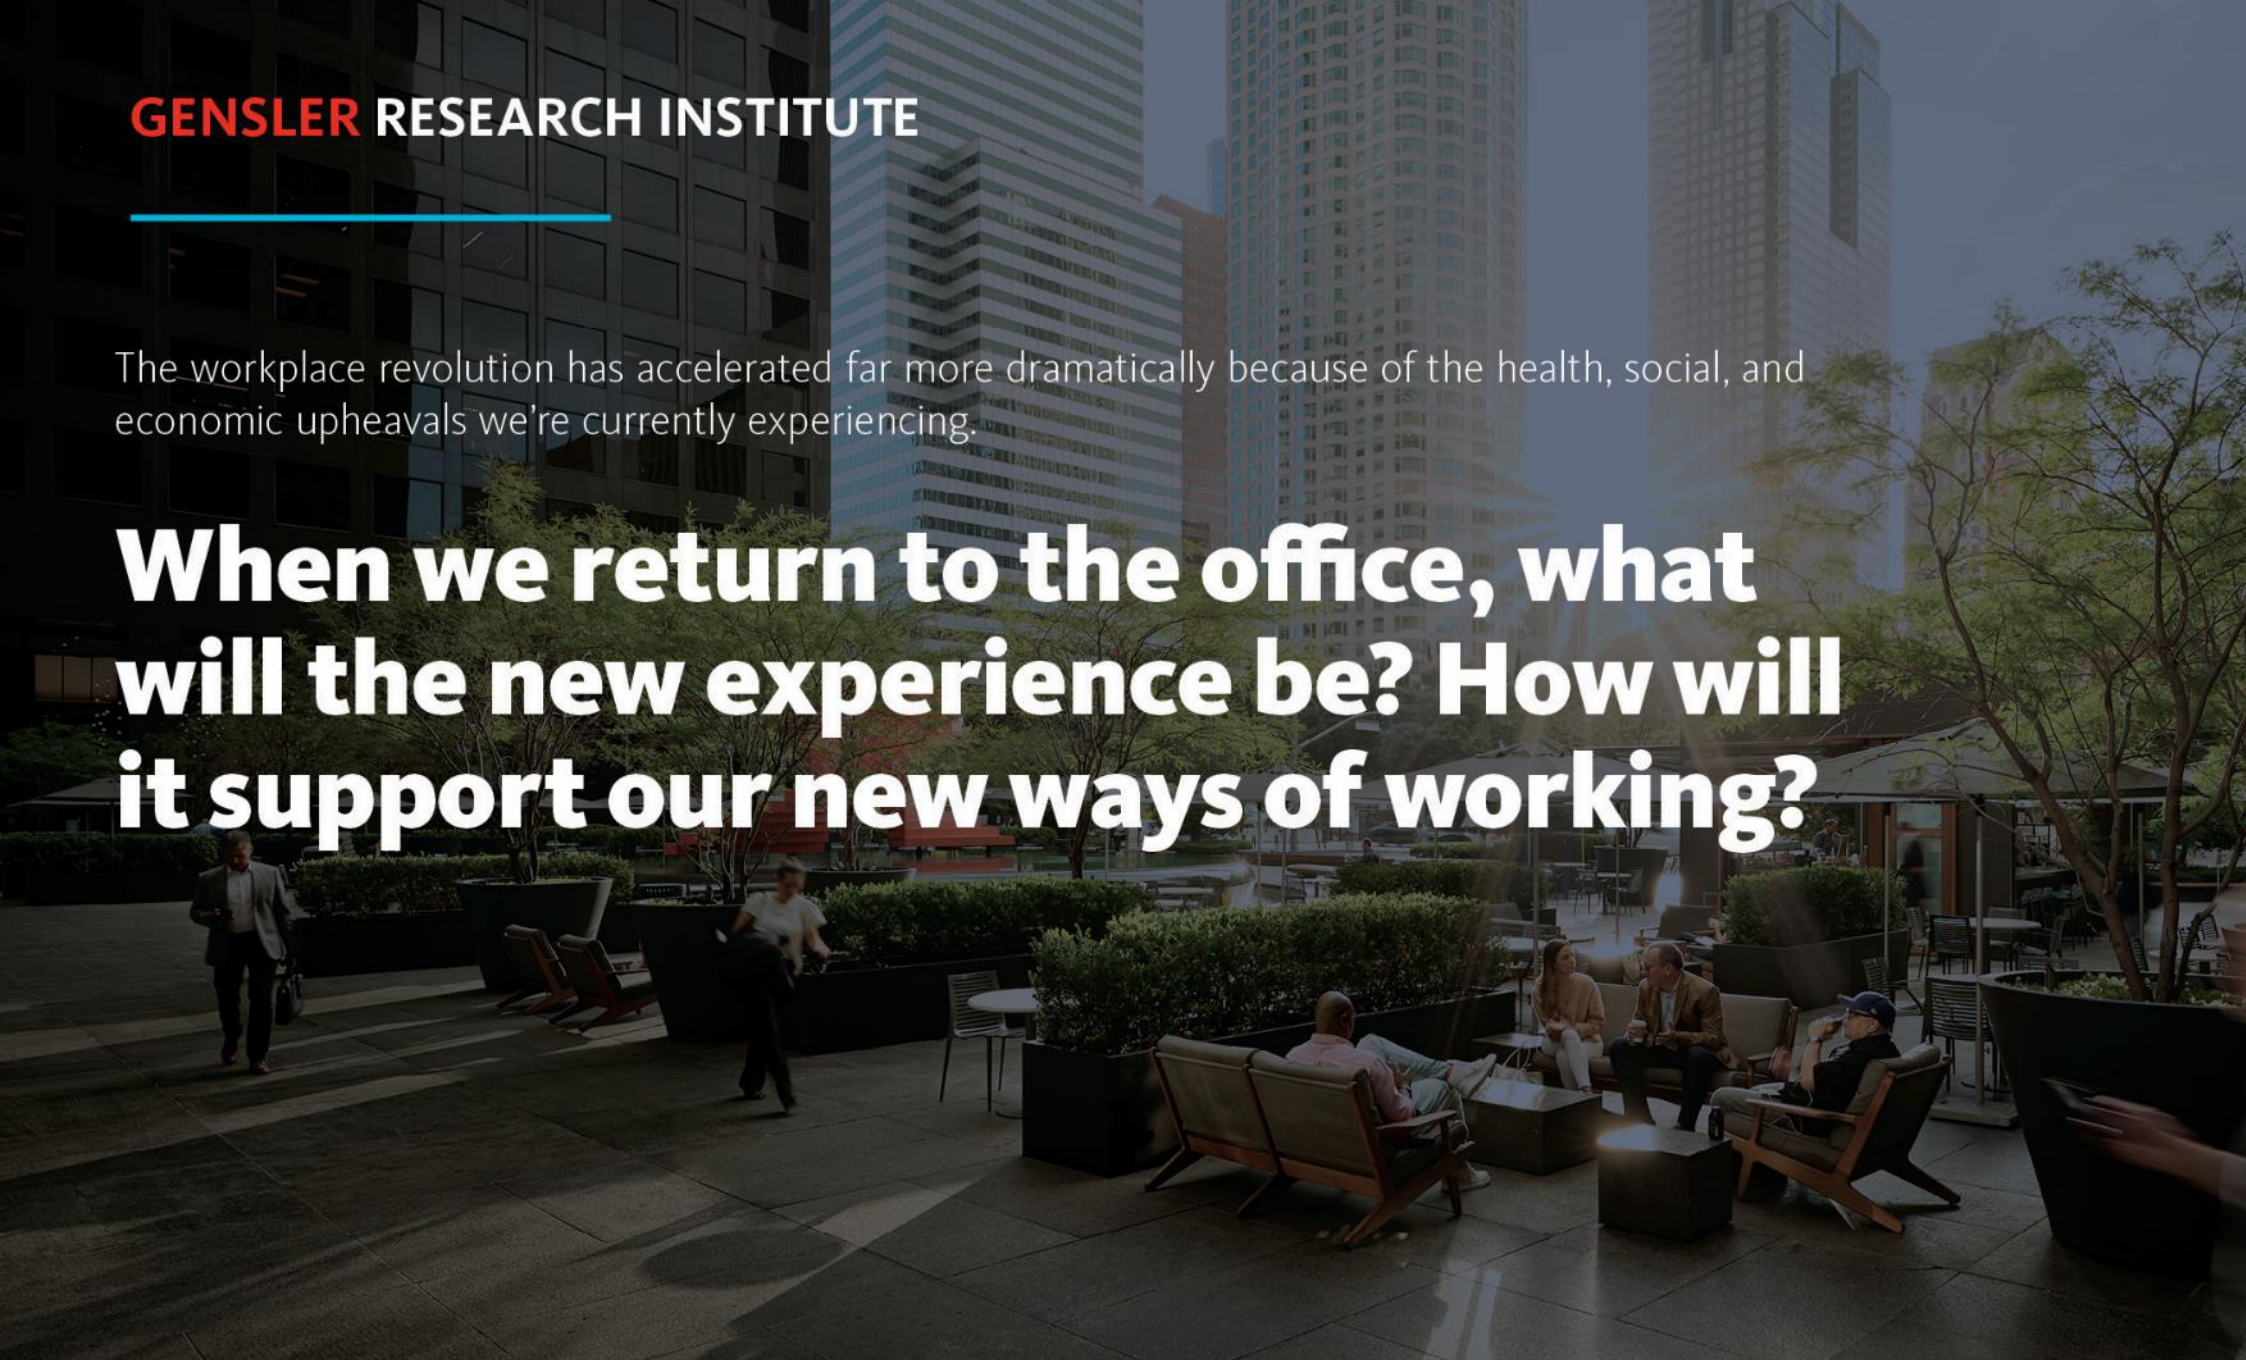

Gensler

Office Sector - Demand, Density and Flex Space Systemic Change or a Return to Yesterday?

UT LAW: 2020 BERNARD O. DOW LEASING INSTITUTE

The workplace revolution has accelerated far more dramatically because of the health, social, and economic upheavals we're currently experiencing.

When we return to the office, what will the new experience be? How will it support our new ways of working?

Most people want to return to the workplace, but with significant changes.

The study that surveyed 2,300+ full-time U.S. office workers at companies of 100 or more people from April 16 to May 4 found that only 12% of U.S. workers want to work from home full-time.

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary \(utcle.org/elibrary\)

Title search: Office Sector - Demand, Density and Flex Space - Systemic Change or a Return to Yesterday?

Also available as part of the eCourse

2020 Bernard O. Dow Leasing Institute eConference

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 2020 Bernard O. Dow Leasing Institute session

"Office Sector - Demand, Density and Flex Space - Systemic Change or a Return to Yesterday?"