Medicaid Update

The Current HHSC Policies on IRAs

- Annuities within IRAs are exempt (from counting as resources)
- IRAs with Required Minimum Distributions are exempt

Sources of Law of the HHSC Policies on IRAs

- There are no sources of law.
- Federal Medicaid law does not require any of these exemptions.
- No state statute, rule or written policy requires them—except for the slides and memo in Appendices 2 and 3 of our paper, obtained by Public Information Request.
- Therefore, they can change at any time without notice.

Annuities within IRAs are exempt—what we know

- Only annuities can be exempt, unless there is RMD.
- Only IRAs get this treatment. Assets in a 401k, 403b, 457 or other retirement account must be rolled over into an IRA for exemption.
- Spousal impoverishment case strategy: “Spend down” by rolling over retirement account assets without RMD into a deferred annuity in an IRA
- Reinvestment in a deferred annuity will make any Traditional IRA exempt even if there is no RMD—e.g. owner is too young to have RMD and it is participatory (not inherited)

IRAs with RMD are exempt-what we know

- After SECURE ACT: RMD begins in year in which IRA owner reaches age 72, if born on or after July 1, 1949; otherwise (if older), in year the owner reaches age 70 ½
- Younger retirement account owners can always make the account exempt by rolling over to an IRA & investing in a deferred annuity.
- Same policy applies to applicants and community spouses.

Pages 3-4

IRAs with RMD are exempt-what we know continued

- RMD is “income” both for eligibility and copayment
- RMD countable as income in any given month is computed by dividing annual RMD by 12
- RMD is determined by HHSC by reviewing a statement by the IRA custodian (not from your citations and calculations)
- RMD is counted as “non-resource produced income” when an enhanced SPRA is calculated (so often blocks that benefit)
- All inherited IRAs are exempt, because all have RMDs
- RMD is not reduced by amount paid as income tax
