

The last 30 years in the United States have been marked by what has been called the era of "permissionless innovation." Many of the decisions about what to innovate, when to innovate, and how to bring digital products and services to the marketplace have been left to tech companies. They decided what products were needed, how they were deployed, and who could purchase them...there are growing signs that era is coming to an end.

—Darrell West, Senior Fellow, Brookings Institution Author of Turning Point: Policy Making in the Era of Artificial Intelligence

3

• Defendant Fenwick & West set up a network of shadowy front organizations, which SBF used to conceal his siphoning of Class Member funds into entities that he separately owned. Fenwick & West also guided FTX's skirting of regulatory oversight, structuring acquisitions to obtain necessary licenses while circumventing regulatory scrutiny, advising on FTX's regulatory dodge, more generally, and supplying personnel to execute on that strategy directly from its own pool of lawyers.

- from complaint in FTX multi-defendant class action O'Keefe v. Sequoia Capital Operations, LLC et al., S.D. Fl. Feb. 2023

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary (utcle.org/elibrary)

Title search: Ethics on the Edge

Also available as part of the eCourse 2023 Technology Law eConference

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 36th Annual Technology Law Conference session "Ethics on the Edge"